

National Honor Society

Selection as a member into the Society is a pinnacle of achievement in academia. This honor, recognized throughout the nation, is both the public recognition of accomplishment and the private commitment to continued excellence on the part of the new member.

Selection into The Honor Society is a privilege, and not a right. It is an extension on individual qualities and talents. The pillars of this society, Scholarship, Leadership, Service, Citizenship and Character are the foundation for individual success, integrity and discipline. These qualities and talents placed together and put to work collectively, leave a positive and enduring mark impacting peers, school and community.
