E-LEARNING: THE CLASSROOM OF THE FUTURE

Where have we been and where are we going?

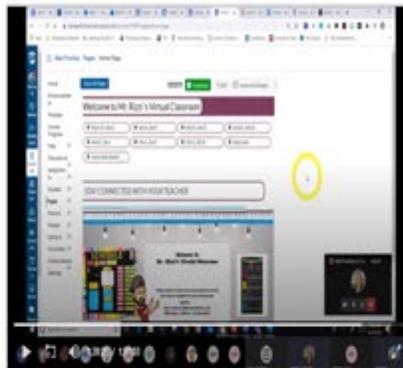

March 2020

Schools close due to the COVID – 19 pandemic and we begin emergency distance learning

March – June 2020

Teachers and administrators learn how to use digital applications to meet and teach students

Summer 2020

A summer of planning for multiple scenarios and participation in ongoing professional development

August - November 2020

We start the school year remotely and then move into a hybrid model

The Future of a Connected Education

How can we “weed, feed, and seed” to come back as a better educational institution?

Guiding Principles

As we identify priorities for reopening of schools

Multiple Reopening Scenarios

Plan for multiple reopening scenarios and contingencies to ensure health, safety, and well-being of all students and staff

Equitable Access to Technology

Continuation of affordable access to broadband connectivity, the internet and related hardware.

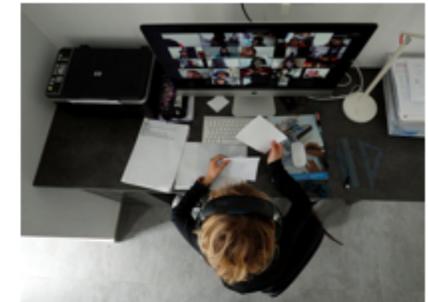

Continued Support

Support to students and adults to address their immediate and long-term physical, psychological, social and emotional needs

Professional Learning

Offer ongoing personalized and differentiated professional learning to administrators, teachers, and support staff

Embrace a New Paradigm for Public Education

View the COVID – 19 crisis as a breakthrough opportunity to transform schools and education as we know them

The difference between virtual education and the combination model

- Most virtual instruction is asynchronous and done through a learning management system
- Students are not scheduled to meet with teachers or other students daily
- Students determine the time, place, and pace of their learning

- Our combination model has students meeting with their teachers synchronously at a designated time
- Students follow a schedule determined by the school and teacher
- Students in class are doing the same work as the remote students
- Students use a learning management system to access content and submit work
