Introduction

The Inclusive Schools Week Celebration Guide contains the information, tools and resources you will need to plan a successful Inclusive Schools Week celebration and to help your school move forward from awareness to action.

What is Inclusive Schools Week?

Inclusive Schools Week is an annual international event celebrated the first week in December. It's a time designated to acknowledge the hard work and commitment of teachers, administrators, students, and parents in making their schools more inclusive and, thereby, significantly contributing to the development of a more inclusive society.

The Week offers a significant opportunity for educators, students and parents to engage in dialogue about inclusive education and to plan for the future. It is a time when schools and communities can begin or continue the journey toward providing a quality education to all children regardless of differences in ability, gender, ethnicity, language and health status.

Since the inaugural celebration in 2001, Inclusive Schools Week has been celebrated by tens of thousands of students, families, and educators in schools and communities in every state in the United States as well as communities across the globe. The Week is proudly sponsored by the Inclusive Schools Network and Stetson & Associates, Inc.

What are the goals of Inclusive Schools Week?

- Celebrate the progress of schools in educating an increasingly diverse student population
- Acknowledge the hard work and commitment of schools, families and communities in creating inclusive opportunities for all children regardless of disability, gender, ethnicity, language, health status, etc.
- Encourage reflection on how culture, policies and practices in schools can promote inclusive education
- Promote action to increase the capacity of schools and communities to meet the needs of all learners.

Why is Inclusive Schools Week important?

Inclusive Schools Week advances an international dialogue on the importance of building inclusive schools and communities, where all students have full access to educational opportunities.

Celebrating is important because it creates an awareness of the benefits and challenges inclusive schools face. It brings the school community together in good spirit for a common purpose. It provides us a pause in our busy lives to reflect on where we are and where we are going. But celebrating is only the beginning. Reflection, planning and action are the elements necessary to understand the potential of inclusive education and realize its promise.

2018 Inclusive Schools Week Theme:

Kaleidoscope of Friends

This year's theme Kaleidoscope of Friends continues the dialogue started during the previous celebrations about how schools can make a difference on their journey toward excellence by following a path of sharing and action. This year you will find a host of resources to plan a successful Inclusive Schools Week celebration and tools aimed at supporting schools in the process of becoming more inclusive.

The theme for this year's Inclusive Schools Week is "Kaleidoscope of Friends." If you look into a kaleidoscope, you see an infinite array of patterns of brilliant light created by repeated reflection.

Kaleidoscope comes from two Greek words: kalos, meaning "beautiful," and eidos, "shape." And indeed, education takes on a beautiful shape when all children belong and are valued as contributing members of the school community. That is the vision of inclusive education; it drives decisions, actions, and core beliefs. Repeated reflection helps shape effective practices to meet the needs of all students. When we add the word "friends" to that image, the result is a myriad of relationships that provide opportunities for the support and growth of all children.

The frame for a kaleidoscope is a circle. All variations of color and shape occur within. The circle represents a safe and inclusive school and community environment.

Who do we include in this circle? Parents, who accept the responsibility to provide a home environment that encourages their child's success in school and in life. They stay informed and involved in their child's education at school and in the community.

Our friends are also teachers who recognize the needs of each child and provide specially designed instruction and support. In inclusive schools, the shared ownership for student success extends throughout the entire school community - from bus drivers to crossing guards, from administrators to custodians, from cafeteria workers to front office personnel, and everyone in between! Together they work to foster relationships within the school and create awareness of effective inclusive practices.

Let's look closer within the luminous "kaleidoscope of friends." We see the students who, as positive role models, welcome, respect, and support their fellow classmates. The power of meaningful friendships to increase appreciation and acceptance of individual differences prepares students for adult life in an inclusive society. The positive effect of respectful peer relationships on bullying and safe school environments has been well documented.

Upon closer reflection, we see the entire community that surrounds the school. It's the community friends who volunteer in school, connect with students, attend student activities, or simply stop to wave at a child in the crosswalk. It's everyone who supports the safety and well-being of each and every child that completes the beautiful vision of a "kaleidoscope of friends."

However, as in a kaleidoscope, we have to adjust the many parts of our school community to create innovative patterns that shape our schools into inclusive environments where all students can learn. The goal is to nurture a caring community of learners with the power to reflect a vibrant light of understanding and mutual respect.

There is no better time than now, during Inclusive Schools Week, for us to reflect, sharpen our vision, and learn what is working from each other. Share with us your "kaleidoscope of friends" as together we once again celebrate the many beautiful shapes of inclusive schools throughout the world.

Planning for Inclusive Schools Week

Getting Started

There are many ways to get your school involved in Inclusive Schools Week. Here are some ideas to get your started:

- Convene a planning team of faculty, students and family members. See the Planning Materials in the Celebration Activities & Lessons section for ideas.
- Create excitement by hosting poster and essay contests, hanging a banner in your school lobby
- Promote the week in your school and community by sending out a press release, announcing your celebration in local media outlets, posting updates on your school website, etc. See our Media Kit in the Celebration Basics Download section for examples.
- Utilize the following resources and materials to support your celebration and continuous efforts to promote and develop practices in your community.
  - Inclusive Schools Network website has a wealth of innovative resources. It is the home of the Inclusive Schools Network and the place to find updated information about Inclusive Schools Week and to order ISW products. Leading up to the ISW Celebration there will be weekly postings of ideas, events, and resources to support schools in planning their ISW activities at <http://inclusiveschools.org/inclusive-schools-week>.
  - Inclusive Schools Network News, our electronic newsletter, will keep you informed and up-to-date on all of the activities and events planned for the Week. Sign up here: <http://bit.ly/1EuvyUx>
  - Celebration Activities for ISW, available at <http://inclusiveschools.org/inclusive-schools-week/isw-activities-and-lessons>, this booklet contains hundreds of ideas for activities that promote inclusive practices during Inclusive Schools Week and throughout the year.
  - Promotional Items: New products including ISW posters, t-shirts, a school banner and some of our student favorites: stickers, pencils, pens, ribbons, bookmarks and other materials to help you promote your celebration of the Week can be purchased here: <http://inclusiveschools.org/shop-2>. The purchase of these items assists in underwriting the costs of supporting the Week as an annual event.

Guiding Principles

In order to get the most out of your ISW celebration we suggest developing a set of guiding principles to help focus your planning efforts. Here are some suggestions:

- Involve families, school faculty and students in the planning of ISW activities.
- Make certain ISW activities are inclusive and accessible to all. See the following section on Inclusive Celebrations for ideas.
(<http://inclusiveschools.org/inclusive-schools-week/isw-activities-and-lessons>)
- Reaffirm your school's commitment to providing a quality education to all children.

Impact of a Well-Planned Inclusive Schools Week

A successful Inclusive Schools Week can motivate your school community. Faculty, families and students should feel empowered by their role in supporting the participation of all students in schooling.

Celebrating Inclusive Schools Week:

- Sends a message to the community that your school is serious about inclusive education.
- Jump-starts plans for initiating or improving inclusive educational practices in your school.
- Makes a positive impact on the overall environment in the school including more tolerance and acceptance of differences.
- Propels your school to new levels of inclusion.
- Solidifies your commitment to quality education for all students.
- Highlights your schools accomplishments and plans for the future.

Inclusive Celebrations

Inclusive Schools Week offers a remarkable opportunity to spread the word about the benefits of inclusive schools. As you prepare for district, school, and classroom celebrations, it is important to ensure that the materials and activities are accessible to all members of the school and community. You may want to encourage faculty members trained in special education and/or bilingual education to participate in the planning process to help make suggestions for providing access and accommodations. Examples of adapting materials and events include:

- Interpreter services for programs and events
- Printed material available in languages spoken in the community and in Braille
- Wheelchair accessibility to all events
- Assistive technology devices available
- Peer support or other support providers for people with disabilities who need physical and/or other kinds of assistance in order to participate.
- Schedule of events to coincide when working parents can attend.
- Culturally responsive events, activities and materials.

The ideas and activities included in the Celebration Kit can be adapted for use with a diverse group of participants. For additional information on adapting curriculum, please consult the resources section.
