Grant Writer in Action

Name: Luisa Dugas

Position: Art Teacher, Croissant Park Elementary

Years of service: 8 years

How many grants have you been awarded and what is the total dollar amount awarded? I have won two Broward Education Foundation (BEF) Teacher Innovation Grants: Printmaking Magic Exploration, and Back to the Past. Three BEF Disseminator Grants: Printmaking Magic Exploration, ABC-Arts, Books and Creativity and Back to the Past, a study of Ancient Civilizations. I have also been awarded seven BEF Adapter grants totaling about $10,000.

Which grant-supported project is your favorite? My favorite grant-based project that I've implemented has been Printmaking Magic Exploration. With the money for this grant I bought all the tools, supplies and books needed to teach various printmaking techniques in the art classroom. Printmaking has been a passion of mine since I was in college, and the techniques of printmaking have always amazed me because of the impressive results. Teaching this topic, which I am so passionate about, and seeing the joy it brings to my students when they are successful is extremely rewarding.

Luisa Dugas presenting her ABC, Art, Books & Creativity project at the BEF Teacher's Idea Expo

What is your process for filling out a grant application? The first thing I do when considering applying for a grant is downloading the questions and importing them into a Word document. I do this, so that I know what I should be focusing on answering, and so that I can work on the grant writing at my leisure and not against the clock. Then I jot down my initial thoughts- what I consider my BIG idea, what are my student's needs as it relates to this big idea and then how I want to implement it. Little by little the project and proposal start to come together. Lastly, I research resources like books, videos, and people who can help me implement this idea. There's a lot of scratch paper and sketches involved!

Do you have any grant writing tips? The best tip I can give to others starting out is: Answer the question completely. Some grant questions have several parts in one question. It is important to address every part or aspect of each question. Another is to keep in mind that when writing grants, the people reading and judging are not necessarily educators and might not know the jargon. It is important to write in colloquial language and not use abbreviations that people in other businesses may not understand and lastly, express your passion. A reader must feel your joy for writing about this topic so they can connect with you and the needs of your students!

Tip for the Day

Tip for the Day: Adding Value to Your Grant Proposal

By Anne Zimmermann on Jun 20, 2018 in Grant Writing, Tips and Tricks – GetEdFunding – Excerpts

Data numbers are not the only important factors that add value to a proposal. There are other statistics that can give grant proposals additional weight and impress funders including:

Achievements and Impact Demonstrating what your school, district or classroom has already achieved shows the funder that you are constantly working on improving goals and creating successful outcomes. Previous successful projects can be your introduction to demonstrating the additional impact the new funding will have.

Every Impact Counts It is important to show your funder who will benefit most from the proposed project. Most funders require information about target audiences and people, or students affected by the project. However, you might also include a broader impact on the community. Aspects of civic engagement in projects can add meaning and value to an application.

Collaboration is a “magic word” when adding value to an application. It shows that you are resourceful, smart, willing to work with others, actively looking for advice and guidance in different places, and trying to maximize outcomes. If you have a partner, be it another educator, school or organization, describe your reasons for seeking collaboration and highlight the partner’s credibility or expertise.
