"We focus so much on our differences, and that is creating, I think, a lot of chaos and negativity and bullying in the world. And I think if everybody focused on what we all have in common - which is - we all want to be happy." Ellen DeGeneres

Keep your Classroom Student-Centered

Students should know what they are learning and why. Students should have a sense of purpose that their learning has real world applications. Make as many real-world applications as possible.

Student-centered classrooms should reflect a blend of individual, collaborative team and large group work. Students should work collaboratively to solve problems and produce common solutions. The teacher should circulate and serve as a facilitator.

Students should utilize personalized technology to produce as well as consume. Student-centered learning demands students spend at least some portion of their day working on personalized learning tasks or projects.

In student-centered classrooms students are doing the bulk of the work and talking. Students' ideas and voices are front and center.
